ON TO OSTEND NOW, PARIS NEXT, WAR CRY. OF THE GERMAN ARMY

French Expect Kaiser's Troops to Take Offensive Along the Entire Line; British Land New Army for Defense of Coast.

GERMANS REPORT VICTORY OF THE CAVALRY AT LILLE

French War Office Says There Have Been Engagements at La Bassee, and That 24 Forts at Antwerp Still Hold Out.

PARIS, Oct. 12 (United Press).—The whole German front is about to take the offensive again, according to military strategists to-day. Attempt by the German forces, which have worn down the defenses of Antwerp to join with the German right wing in assaults westward toward the coast, is expected here to be the signal for a general attack on the whole battle line, now extending well over three hundred miles. A new attempt to pierce the centre line and another rush toward Paris is believed to be part of the plan.

The German General Staff by this offensive, it is explained, probably hopes to keep the allies sufficiently busy all along the line to prevent the sending of reinforcements to ward off the encircling movement out of Lille.

The French War Office has scented the trap. French and British strategists long ago anticipated that Antwerp must fall, and started a concentration of forces at Ostend. New British troops, among them, it is reported, many from Canada, are understood to be ready for this new German offensive toward the seacoast.

In the face of a renewal of activity on the part of German aerial craft, Paris refuses to view the situation in any other light than that of extreme optimism.

The morale of the allied troops is splendid. The weather has improved greatly, the rains ceased for the most part, and the German artillery fire is less frequent, particularly at Verdun, which fortress has now sustained German bombardment for eight weeks.

To-day's official 3 o'clock communique told of the attempt of the German western line to sweep forward on the French coast to the straits of Dover. It characterized the situation as good. Vigorous cavalry engagements continue in the region of La Bassee, Estaires and Hazebrouck. The statement says that a German attack between Lassigny and Roye was repulsed, and that the French forward movement continues along the centre.

[Announcement of cavalry engagements as far west as Hazebrouck is significant. The German advance has always been heralded by the reconnaissance of Uhlan in force. Hazebrouck is only forty miles distant from Boulogne.]

England Gets Ready for Raid of Zeppelins With Bombs

LONDON, Oct. 12 (Associated Press).—The only notice of the arrival of hostile aircraft in the neighborhood of the Thames and Medway, says the Mayor of Gravesend in a proclamation posted to-day will be the firing of guns from the defenses.

The notice adds: "Persons seeking to gratify their curiosity will

War Bothers Army Contractors. WASHINGTON, Oct. 12.—Army contractors have got into difficulty in filling some of their contracts owing to the European war. Some of the goods which they have undertaken to supply either in whole or in part are of European origin, and it has been impossible to get these under the old contracts. This is true in the case of field glasses using imported lenses and like supplies.

VICTIM OF POISON TAKEN IN STATION REVEALS HER NAME

Says She Is Nina Ennis and That She Hopes Bichloride Will Kill Her.

LIFE MAY BE SAVED.

Keeps Motive for Suicidal Attempt Mystery, but Says She Is Unwedded.

The comely young woman who swallowed bichloride of mercury in the women's dressing room in the Grand Central Station yesterday evening revealed her identity to-day in Flower Hospital.

She said she hoped she would die, but the hospital surgeons say they may be able to save her life, as she took such a terrific dose that there was an immediate reaction and prompt remedial measures were taken.

The young woman told Detective Matthew D. Kelly that she is Nina Ennis, twenty-four, a trained nurse. Her mother, she said, is Mrs. E. Ryder, who lives in the MacLaren Apartments at MacLaren and Guilmore streets, Ottawa, Canada.

Kelly pressed her to tell why she tried to kill herself. She would only say that she had been despondent and had carried the poison for some time. She would not say how long she had been in New York, nor would she give her address here, but admitted that she had a room in Twelfth street, near University Place.

Although she wears a wedding ring she insisted that she was not married. A few minutes before she made her attempt at suicide, Miss Ennis was in the company of a man who had accompanied her to the station. He went with her to the hospital last night and visited the Second Branch Detective Bureau to tell what he knew about the young woman.

He said he was D. De Rivecourt, a portrait painter, living at No. 24 West Sixtieth street. A year ago he had a painting on exhibition in a gallery at Chicago. There he became acquainted with the girl who took the poison yesterday. They were together only an hour. She told him her first name was Nina, he said, but he did not learn her family name.

Last Friday, he said, he met her as he was coming out of a Broadway theatre. She asked him not to accompany her home, but said she would meet him yesterday in the Fourteenth street subway station. They did meet, and spent the day together, taking dinner at Brighton Beach. After dinner the girl, who had brought a travelling bag with her, asked him to take her to the Grand Central Station.

She told him that she was married and that her husband was in Montreal, and she was on her way to join him. On the way to the station she told the artist that before they parted she would tell her last name and give him her address so he could write to her.

Leaving him at the ticket office, she excused herself for a few minutes to arrange her hair. While she was away the train for Montreal was announced, and the artist was looking for her when he saw her being wheeled away in the rolling chair. He was permitted to go home after he had told his story.

The young woman had no railroad ticket and her purse contained only $1.

ITALY BRINGS BACK 100,000 VETERANS FROM LYBIAN FIELD

Continues Steady Mobilization of Her Army and May Enter War.

PARIS, Oct. 12.—A Naples despatch says twenty Italian transport ships, heavily escorted by an Italian naval fleet, sailed to-day to bring back the Italian troops now in Tripoli and Cyrenaica. Their places will be taken by a volunteer corps just formed in Italy.

Although the return of troops from Libya is ostensibly due to the fact that their term of enlistment has expired, the movement is universally accepted in Italy as another of the steady preparations being made by the Italian Government for eventual participation in the present war.

Should Italy take possession of Trieste and Trent, as it is confidently expected she will do if she joins the allies, she thus will have 100,000 more trained soldiers than otherwise, the troops being brought back from Tripoli being still subject to military duty under a general mobilization.

Italy's "precautionary mobilization" now consists of about five hundred thousand soldiers. These comprise the chief military units that would be employed in a war against Austria. The task of these troops is to make the preparations necessary for filling out to war strength all the units the instant a general mobilization is ordered.

It is considered unlikely that with this preparation Italy will order the mobilization of any more troops until the actual moment the entire military strength is called out, if it ever is, for active participation in war.

Features of Game Seen at a Glance

Murphy, the first of the Athletics to go to bat, stung Tyler for a two-base hit.

Connolly's clean muff of Collins's liner let Murphy in with the first run of the game.

Tyler pitched two balls to "Home Run" Baker and then struck him out with the next three. Johnny Evers was the first of the Braves to hit Bush safely, lacing a beauty to left for a base in the second half of the first inning.

Gowdy proved himself a hero again in the second when his double into the left field stand scored Maranville with the tying run.

Tyler seemed to be getting better for in the third he disposed of Bush, Murphy and Oldring in the order named.

Baker was called out on strikes in facing Tyler the second time. He tried to outwait the pitcher and was fooled.

The Athletics went into the lead in the fourth when Walsh's single scored McInnis. The latter had previously doubled into the stand in left field.

Maranville's drive down the left field foul line looked like a homer. Schmidt ran in from second and Maranville chased across the plate, too. Umpire Hildebrand, however, shocked the Boston rooters by calling the hit foul and "the rabbit" had to bat again while Schmidt went back to second. Schmidt came in a moment later when Maranville this time shot a single to centre.

Oldring missed a good chance to make a hero of himself by striking out in the fifth, after Murphy had contributed his second two-bagger.

Maranville pulled off a neat double play in the sixth when Collins on first and Baker at bat attempted the hit-and-run play. Evers shot Baker's drive to the Rabbit on second and the latter got the ball to Schmidt to nail Baker in jig time.

Deal doubled in the sixth and Maranville had a grand chance to score him. He was doubted when he popped up a fly to Schang.

Schmidt prevented a three-bagger in the eighth, dove after Bush's hard drive and, after knocking it down, tossed it over his shoulder to Tyler for a put out. It was a spectacular play.

Baker got into the game in the ninth with a double, and after Walsh walked things looked gloomy for Boston. Barry eased their minds by popping up a fly to Gowdy for the third out.

FENWAY PARK, BOSTON, Oct. 12.—The Boston won the third game of the world's series in the twelfth inning. A wild throw by Bush when two were on bases let in the winning run. He threw wildly after recovering Moran's easy grounder.

Gowdy's home run drive and Evers's single helped to tie the score in the ninth round.

The opening of the gates was like an unveiling to those accustomed to the usual field in which romped the Red Sox. The whole thing was changed. Tier after tier of high banked seats covered the grass that once made up an open field in centre.

This made possible a seating capacity of 35,000 and Secretary Nickerson assured us that the attendance would reach that figure, the reserved seats having been taken more than a week ago.

In right field the seats had been built down to a line dangerously
